

Where should I submit my research?

Turn over for a quick decision...

BMJ

BMJ: The Open Access Journal

Open Access The full text of all research articles is free from the moment of publication on bmj.com and all of them are deposited immediately on PubMedCentral

Relevance BMJ publishes clinical research that's relevant to practice, policy, and future research and helps doctors to make better decisions

High visibility BMJ's website bmj.com attracts more than a million unique users a month from all over the world, and BMJ has a weekly print circulation of over 100,000

Rapid decision times
2-8 weeks to decision
Then 2-3 weeks to full open access online publication

Fast track 4 weeks from submission to publication for highly important research

Convenience An easy to use online editorial office where you can track your article and read reviewers' signed reports

Readability BMJ carries fully detailed research articles online while, in print, BMJ has shorter more readable versions

International BMJ has an international editorial advisory board and also publishes international editions in 9 different countries

Free It's free to submit your research to the BMJ: we have no authors' charges or page charges

BMJ is only as good as the articles in it, so we work hard to support the researchers who trust us to publish their work.

Don't forget to read the following articles

Open access to research
Fiona Godlee
<http://www.bmj.com/openaccess>

Why submit research to the BMJ
Trish Groves
<http://www.bmj.com/whysubmit>